Genesis of the Chauffeur.

Chauffeurs existed, says Fargy, long before there were automobiles. History tells us that along about the year 1705, there sprang up in France, principally in the eastern and central regions, fantastically dressed men with their faces blackened with soot and their eyes carefully concealed, who gained admittance to farm houses and other isolated dwellings at night and committed all kinds of depredations and outrages. They had an atrocious habit especially, from which they obtained the name that posterity has preserved for them. They first garrotted their victims, and dragged them in front of a great fire, where they burned the soles of their feet. Then they demanded of them where their money and jewels were concealed. Such interrogatories could scarcely be resisted. It is from this that is derived the appellation of "chauffeur" which once so terrified old ladies but which at present evokes in us only cheerful and pleasing thoughts of automobilism and of voyages and excursions at twenty-five and thirty miles an hour, in which there is nothing but the roads and paved streets that are scorched.—Scientific American.

THE USE OF SUNDAY.

Human Nature and the Rights of Humans Have a Bearing on the Problem Which Even Sentiment Is Bound to Respect.

The Sunday observance question has thrust itself forward this spring with more than usual determination. Many explanations might be given for this, but if we were to attempt to account for the fact in a general way we should say that the reason is to be looked for in the larger use of Sunday for purposes of recreation by those whose instruments of pleasure do not come per se under the ban. We have no comments to make upon Sunday automobilism from the standpoint of either propriety or impropriety but we should have to admit that indulgence in it has whetted the appetite of those who are without cars, but who have other means, more attractive or so-called recreation, for more freedom of choice.

The bothersome feature of this growing controversy is the establishment of the point at which recreation becomes legitimate and unless we are mistaken it will be more bothersome yet; that is, before the question of rights is settled, a gentleman who realizes that the Sunday of his generation is more flexible than the Sunday of his father and would probably convince his grandfather that his is a Godless generation admits that further concessions will doubtless have to be made, but that beyond a certain point must not be permitted to go. Neither he nor any other man living is able to state what that certain point is, except to lay down the defensible proposition that no form of recreation shall be permitted which deprives others of their rights and which creates manifest disorders. Still another gentleman, who has lived through several controversies of a somewhat similar character, regards the whole thing as a perfectly natural outburst of popular will and as sure to settle itself according to the great common sense of the American people. We do not understand that anybody wishes the aristocratic proposition enforced that all Government oversight shall be withdrawn. What most earnest people want is a general recognition of the rights and needs of society from the point of view of all the factors and agencies which should count; not the recognition of the rights of one class as compared with the rights of another class, a task much more simple than it appears on the surface of things.

One will read the appeal of Admiral Evans in behalf of his men for a more liberal interpretation of their shore rights on Sunday, and in moving service with the feeling that the purpose is a humane one and not at all an irrelevant. We at least believe that this will be the feeling of the average man. He says: "It is well known that where several hundred men are confined in such narrow limits as the ship, where the means of diversion are few and all are desirous of taking advantage of any opportunity which will enable them to have a run on shore." From this point Admiral Evans argues and argues effectively for the right of the jacksies to indulge in field sports when ashore upon that day. As he says, it would be much better to let a town like Provincetown, to give to the wishes of the men than to have two or three thousand of them roaming around the streets in absolute idleness. It is a very narrow outlook, as it seems to us, which would overlook the moral and physical aspects of this case for no better purpose than to enforce arbitrary views, while the case itself is more or less typical of the needs which exist in all large centers of population during the larger number of months in the year. It may be regrettable that the necessity of a more liberal Sunday must be considered at all, but human nature has to be treated in a humane way, whether the individuals think so or not.—New Haven Register.

I regard Dr. King's New Discovery as the greatest, scientific remedy in existence." Surest cough and cold cure and throat and lung healer. Guaranteed by the Red Cross Pharmacy, 306 and 41. ## The First Air Brake.

Persons who should have known better thought Westinghouse visionary when they were told that he proposed to stop a train by air. Nobody seemed inclined to let him try his plan on a real train, but they did not object to his working a model of it in a shop where he couldn't do any harm, nor in value anybody else in expense. He knew his scheme would work, but he knew he couldn't make anyone else believe it. So he continued to sell his invention for replacing detailed cars on the tracks, and to talk about it to anybody on a railroad man who was willing to listen.

"Well, have you ever stopped a train with this air thing of yours?" they would ask.

No, he couldn't say that he had done so. Nobody would let him try it even on a train of dummy cars. One day he arrived in Pittsburgh, selling his other invention and talking about his brake notion to a man connected with a railroad out there. "That's a great idea of yours," said the man, "we will try it on our line!"

So the office of this railroad permitted Westinghouse to put his new "kicksaw" on one of their trains. But he had to agree to indemnify the road for any damage that might be caused to the train as the result of the trials. The train was equipped. On the designated day the confident inventor and a group of skeptical railway men boarded the train on which the first air brakes were fixed. Off went the train on its trial trip; the engineer put on full speed, and just as he had rounded a curve he saw ahead, at a grade crossing, and in the middle of the track, a loaded wagon, a man and a boy, and a bulky horse. The engineer moved his little lever, and the first train that was ever stopped by air pulled up at a standstill several feet short of the obstruction.

Thus, on its first trial, the Westinghouse air brake saved life and prevented damage to property. Thereafter, no talking was necessary; all that had to be done was to make brakes. The inventor thought of that clause securing compensation to the railroad for any damage he might do to the train, and he laughed at it. His fortune dated from that day, and he was only twenty-two.

It Costs Nothing

To find out for a certainty whether or not your heart is affected. One person in four has a weak heart; it may be you. If so, you should know it now, and save serious consequences. If you have short breath, fluttering, palpitation, hungry spells, hot flushes; if you cannot lie on left side; if you have fainting or smothering spells, pain around heart, in side and arms, your heart is weak, and perhaps diseased. Dr. Miles' Heart Cure will relieve you. Try a bottle, and see how quickly your condition will improve.

"About a year ago I wrote to the Miles Medical Co. asking advice, as I was suffering with heart trouble, and had been for two years. I had pain in my heart, back and left side, and had not been able to draw a deep breath for two years. Any little exertion would cause palpitation, and I could not lie on my left side without suffering. They advised me to try Dr. Miles' Heart Cure and Nerve, which I did with the result that I am in better health than I ever was before, having gained 14 pounds since I commenced taking it. I took about thirteen bottles of the two medicines, and haven't been bothered with my heart since." MISS LILLIE THOMAS, Upper Sandusky, Ohio.

Dr. Miles' Heart Cure is sold by your druggist, who will guarantee that the first bottle will benefit. If it fails he will refund your money.
